

ADELAIDE INSTITUTE

PO Box 3300
Adelaide 5067
Australia
Mob: 61+401692057
Email: info@adelaideinstitute.org
Web: <http://www.adelaideinstitute.org>

Online
ISSN 1440-9828

December 2011 No 540

Germany breaks taboo with Hitler exhibition

NewsCore, October 12, 2010

No exhibition dedicated to Hitler has been held in Germany since World War II Source: AAP

AN EXTREMELY nervous Germany is preparing to stage the first exhibition dedicated to Hitler since the Fuhrer killed himself in his Berlin bunker in 1945.

The exhibition, Hitler and the Germans, opens Friday and breaks a long-standing taboo. Since WWII, there have been dozens of museum displays on Nazi crimes, on the Holocaust, on slave labor, on the murdering doctors, cruel judges and massacring soldiers - and all triggered debates and protests.

But Hitler has always been out of bounds, in Berlin most of all, lest neo-Nazis start to swarm to the museum and pay tribute to the dictator of the Third Reich. The emotional power of Hitler was shown two years ago when a wax model was put on display in the Berlin branch of Madame Tussauds. An enraged visitor pushed past security guards and ripped Hitler's head off. It seems, though, that times have changed. "Neo-Nazis have not been known to cross the threshold of museums in the past," said Hans-Ulrich Thamer, who is curating the Hitler show in the German Historical Museum. Rudolf Trabold, museum spokesman, said, "We should even hope that they do come and get to grips with what we are putting on show, and how we're doing it."

The museum is part of the old Zeughaus, scene of an unsuccessful attempt to blow up Hitler. Across the road is the Bebelplatz, where Nazis made a huge bonfire out of so-called decadent books. And a 10-minute walk away is the patch of green concealing Hitler's wartime bunker.

The new exhibition tries hard to be unprovocative. None of Hitler's many tunics are on display, and anything that could have been personally touched by the Fuhrer has been banished from the museum. Nor are there any bone fragments.

"Don't worry," said one historian, after getting a sneak preview. "They have made sure that you won't come into contact with any of Hitler's DNA."

<http://www.perthnow.com.au/news/world/germany-breaks-taboo-with-hitler-exhibition/story-e6frg1p3-1225937922041>

German with Hitler ringtone faces jail Adelaide Now, 1 Jul 2010
Letter shows Hitler's affection for British The Australian, 24 Mar 2010

Auschwitz sign recovered The Australian, 21 Dec 2009
Neo-Nazi guards Danish royals Herald Sun, 8 Nov 2009
Heil the name of the gnome The Australian, 15 Oct 2009

From: YouTube Service service@youtube.com Sent: Sunday, 10 October 2010 7:29 PM

To: toben@toben.biz Subject: YouTube Video Notification

YouTube | Broadcast Yourself™

Regarding your account: FredrickToben

The following video(s) from your account have been disabled for violating the YouTube Community Guidelines:
Dr William Pierce: How World War Two Started - (FredrickToben)
Your account has received one Community Guidelines warning sanction, which will expire in six months. Additional violations may result in the temporary disabling of your ability to post content to YouTube and/or the termination of your account.
Sincerely, The YouTube Team Copyright © 2010 YouTube, LLC

From: Fredrick Toben toben@toben.biz Sent: Monday, 11 October 2010 1:29 AM
Subject: RE: YouTube Video Notification of censorship - YouTube team members are thieves
To: 'YouTube Service' service@youtube.com

1. Well, well – it had to come my way from the YouTube team that has now bent to pressure but doing it selectively because there is so much rubbish on YouTube that the team needs to target individuals who dare to speak out.
2. Still, if the Snyder v Phelps case before the US Supreme Court is decided in Phelps' favour, expected sometime in 2011, then the team shames itself for violating the First Amendment.
3. But the team is in good company – http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XGw3_U91utU
4. In any case, whoever made this decision to pull the plug on this video clip reveals an infantile mind that is morally and intellectually bankrupt.
5. So, YouTube team: Shame on you, shame on you. If you enforced your 'community standards' with some justice, then you should remove all Holocaust believers' rubbish that is so blatantly full of falsehoods, which by the way also defames the German people.
6. The YouTube team will now vet the Fredrick Töben site with glee – make my day, as if I cared because you have no sense of justice and you don't care about truth content, and you love those sexual videos that individuals upload but you hate those who upload videos that tell the truth about historical events.
7. You continue to fear truth emerging on your website and thereby you continue to distort history by blocking videos that tell the truth. No, you are not only distorting history but you are perverting it into trash.
8. Look in the mirror and look at your own reflection – how powerful you are! You can pull the plug on my submissions on this website. Wow! – and if I don't acknowledge this message of yours, below, then I cannot access my site and it will remain permanently blocked to me.

9. Oh, I will be so heartbroken, I'll be so angry and hurt – gimme, gimme back my addiction to YouTube and gimme back 'Dr William Pierce: How World War Two Started'.

10. You are now also thieves, and so YouTube team, my message to you is direct, blunt and crude: Make my day and get foxtrot-uniform-charley-kilo-echo-delta!

Sincerely http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=A10I_3e8B_I

From: michael To: service@youtube.com
Sent: Monday, October 11, 2010 9:21 PM Subject: Frederick Toben
Re : Dr William Pierce: How World War Two Started

I see you've blocked that vid. Just means you are a front for the mass murderers of humanity, the Jews, as what they do to Palestinians is what they have in mind for the 7,000,000,000 of us on the planet.

Since you either are Jews or behave as they would wish you to, then 'community guidelines' really is pc speak for covering for the mass murderers of humanity. I therefore accuse you of being accessories before the fact of the mass murder of humanity, for the reason that you wish to thwart the process of more and more people getting to know the real political history of ww2 which would result in there being less chance of Jews leveraging the political process to their advantage in getting humanity to murder one another as was the case with World War Two. George Orwell would have been impressed with your choice of 'community guidelines' as the perfect cover for a purpose so evil not even he thought to project onto Emmanuel Goldstein.

Michael Mazur, Brunswick Vic.

Comments on Töben's registration denied to attend International Conference on Antisemitism and Holocaust Denial – see program details in Newsletter No 543

It is clear that "Shoa Business" is still alive but it is not clear that it is still well. Who's paying for the present Zionist extravaganza? Poor bankrupt Ireland, whose bones have already been picked clean by globalist financiers?

James Damon jamesmdamon@yahoo.com 1 November 2010

Yes, such an attitude gives them more power when no one objects, and when one does, the point of argument is dismissed with their same old rhetoric....debasing character, and if they can not put that person down...other more physical methods are used... Your letter doesn't mock ! It is to the point..and that is what more should do...ruffle more feathers as I said earlier... – Amy Aremia

Good on you! (re your response to the Conference organisers.) I am wondering if Ireland's public purse is party to the funding of this anti-democratic endeavour which disdains all fair public information balance?

There may be some mileage in asking, for when the London Jewish Book Week refused to allow me entry, I won a complaint about this ill-treatment of the public's being refused admission on unfair discriminatory grounds with the Arts Council who were using public funds to sponsor the event. (After all, you were not found to be 'a criminal danger to the public' though wrongfully incarcerated for 50 days when foreign authorities forced you to enter England in 2008!)

Cheers, Michèle Renouf ladyrenouf@tellingfilms.co.uk
October 31, 2010

You have struck just the right note of mocking seriousness in your protest. If this 'conference' wishes to achieve the desired result, it clearly must exclude all those who might threaten such a result.

I see some of the usual gang is featured: the named-after-the-completely-exploded 'Nazi-hunter' Centre, the famous-hairdresser-funded professor, other beacons of suspect scholarship, and a few fellow-travellers. I miss the Weasel and the Froggy one whose name thankfully escapes me—ah no, I'm afraid I have it after all—Klarsfeld. Surely this is an important, if redundant, opportunity for these monoculturalists to repeat their mystic formula among the crowd? I see without surprise that, with negligible exceptions, they are all of the same faith. A local token guest is Prof. 'McElligoat' (my sp.), who presumably has learnt the value of pulling this goat's wool over people's eyes.

The fundamental question that arises is, of course: how do they expect to be taken seriously, as an assembly that is billed as 'conferring' on a subject, when they are only preaching to the converted and the outcome is mere predestined propaganda?

I believe they are, in fact, only talking at each other, while trying to outdo each other's ostensible convictions, a) to bolster their own confidence, and b) to compete for available supporting funds.

So my rhetorical question is answered: they will (typically) drum up a heated argument, in 'question time', whereby one agitated 'professor' will attack another same, over some vital trifle. Fisticuffs will only be avoided by the bell for the Conference Dinner, where they can all calm down and congratulate themselves on another job well done. Same time next year? – Gerard Menuhin

A model of reasoned argument. – CARLOS
carloswporter@yahoo.es

What a certain Prof. Finkelstein, US-Jew, called „The Holo... Industry“, seems to be big biz – And, NOT surprising, "they" want to keep among themselves, a "herd of those who do believe", NOT people who Do want to know, and see proofs. – Günter Deckert guenter.deckert@gmx.de

In a message dated 10/31/2010 8:35:33 P.M. Eastern Daylight Time, toben@toben.biz writes:

Dear Gordon Duff

Your posting of Anthony Lawson's video indicates there is a convergence between 9/11 and Holocaust Revisionism – something that will upset/does upset a lot of individuals.

However, as someone who has been in this Holocaust business on a full-time basis for 16 years I can see that Jon Faine's blocking technique is the same as that employed by Holocaust believers to stop Revisionists from airing their legitimate concerns about the official Holocaust conspiracy theory, namely that Germans exterminated Jews in homicidal gas chambers.

As a point of interest, I attach the below email.

Any comment from you, please?

Cheers. Fredrick Töben

From: Gpduf@aol.com

Sent: Monday, 1 November 2010 11:39 AM

To: toben@toben.biz

Cc: info@adelaideinstitute.org; jimwdean@aol.com;

winchester66@tampabay.rr.com;

ken.okeefe@alohapalestine.com

Subject: Re: FW: TOBEN'S Registration DENIED - International Conference on Antisemitism...

Fred (call me Gordon) When I heard about the conference in Dublin I was considering writing about it. The only venue I could think of using was humor.

As, for reasons unknown, I manage to maintain a larger readership than those to are actually attending the conference, I considered...my own special type of coverage. You can get angry about things like this...really the lowest form of theatre...or you can step back...and use the tools you have. There is no question that the conference is offensive in nature and was meant to be.

However, what it tells me is that, in order to stage something as sad and meaningless as this, there must be a real feeling of desperation on the part of those who have made the holocaust an industry. "We con the world" should really have been done about this conference.

Yes. You were right to contact me. I have NO fear of taking these bastards on.

g

cc. Jim W. Dean, Joe Cortina, Ken O'Keefe

Gordon Duff is a Marine Vietnam veteran, and Senior Editor at Veterans Today. His career has included extensive experience in international banking along with such diverse areas as consulting on counter insurgency, defense technologies or acting as diplomatic officer of UN humanitarian groups. Gordon Duff's articles are published around the world and translated into a number of languages. He is regularly on TV and radio, a popular and sometimes controversial guest.Read Full

IN BRIEF

Is this why Dublin is hosting the November 2010 HOLOCAUST- SHOAH INVERSION conference?

McCarthy warning: IMF is at our door October 31 2010

Bord Snip economist says Budget is our last chance for sovereignty. Economist Colm McCarthy has starkly warned that the International Monetary Fund will be running Ireland by February if the Budget "fails to convince the financial markets".

In what he calls a "scary scenario", outlined in the Sunday Independent today, Mr McCarthy says "the game is up" if the Government flunks the Budget on December 7. The sense of impending doom is also evident in the latest Sunday Independent/Quantum Research poll, which found that a massive 64 per cent believe it to be "inevitable" that Ireland will need the help of the IMF in the new year.

Mr McCarthy has said that if the Budget does "too little" to convince the financial markets, the Government will be unable to finance itself -- "which means an IMF/European bail-out and economic policy dictated from outside the country for the first time since the State was founded". He warns that the country's cash reserves will run low by next spring, unless Ireland re-enters the bond market with a "pretty big issue" of up to €5bn. "Realistically, the Government needs to do this in January or February at the latest," he says.

Mr McCarthy, an economics lecturer at UCD, headed a group which recommended savings of up to €5.3bn in a report commissioned by the Government and published in July of last year. Most of its recommendations have not been implemented. The public finances are in such a dire state that the former Fine Gael leader, Garret FitzGerald, said yesterday that the national interest would not be served by a Dail defeat of what he predicted would be the toughest Budget in the history of the State. "It seems to me that in the present critical situation, the national interest would not be served by a Dail defeat of the Budget -- whatever its contents may be," he said.

Government sources were yesterday anxious to downplay speculation that Finance Minister Brian Lenihan intends to bring the Budget date forward, closer to the as yet unspecified publication date of its four-year budgetary plan, which has to be submitted to the European Commission in Brussels this month. There was a view last week that a convergence of the dates would reduce the possibility that TDs who support the Government might defect upon publication of the budgetary plan to cut the public deficit by €15bn by 2014.

Government sources were yesterday confident that the Budget would be passed on December 7 and that there would be no defections from Fianna Fail, the Greens or by independent TDs who support the Government. Yesterday, Dr FitzGerald also said he did not believe that the Budget would fall due to the defection of TDs who have supported the Government up to this point. However, a growing number of political observers believe that the survival of the Government will be tested when the specific detail of the Budget is outlined in the Finance Bill in January.

A government source said yesterday: "If the Government is to fall, I would say it will fall on some detail or other of the Finance Bill, rather than on the Budget itself." In the event that the Budget is defeated, Dr FitzGerald has suggested a deal which would see the Government agree to dissolve the Dail at once "or, perhaps preferably, in early January" -- in return for which the Opposition would agree to an immediate vote to adopt the Budget.

In the Irish Times yesterday, Dr FitzGerald said: "If the opposition parties then won the subsequent election, as seems almost certain, and if the two of them together agreed on budgetary changes that would not affect the size of the general government balance in 2011, they could then effect such changes when they took power after the election.

"Such an arrangement could avoid the potentially disastrous impact of a budgetary collapse, followed by a consequent dissolution of the Dail and weeks of electioneering, while our financial stability was being put at risk.

"I raise this matter now because unless some arrangement of this kind is contemplated, a Budget defeat in the Dail could leave us without either a Government or a Budget for a month or more, followed by the likely emergence of a new Government under huge pressure to produce a new Budget at once." Mr McCarthy has said that the four-year plan will be critical, but that the Budget measures "will matter even more". He said the priority was to reduce sharply the projected amount of fresh borrowing for 2011 and to hope that Ireland's re-entry to the bond market goes well.

"Those who object to a tough Budget on the grounds that it will weaken an already weak economy are whistling in the wind unless they can identify a less deflationary option. "It is not that we are living beyond our means: we are living beyond the willingness of lenders to lend," he said.

The public, meanwhile, remains hugely pessimistic about the country's prospects. Asked if they believed that there was real scope for economic growth and job creation over the next four years, a huge 68 per cent said no, while only 32 per cent said yes, according to our poll.

- JODY CORCORAN Sunday Independent

<http://www.independent.ie/national-news/mccarthy-warning-imf-is-at-our-door-2401372.html>

Holocaust studies become mandatory in public schools in southern Brazilian city

By Stan Lehman (CP) – Oct 19, 2010

SAO PAULO — A city in southern Brazil that has suffered a series of neo-Nazi incidents is requiring all public schools to teach about the Holocaust. The new law, the first of its kind in Brazil, will go into effect next year in all of Porto Alegre's 96 public schools, where some 60,000 students study, the city government's website said Tuesday. The author of the law,

Alderman Valter Nagelstein said Tuesday that including the Holocaust in the school curriculum will help prevent it from happening again, and said he hopes it also will curb "the kind of neo-Nazi incidents we have seen in the past."

Porto Alegre's Jewish community of close to 15,000 has often been targeted by skinhead groups and neo-Nazis who have desecrated cemeteries and synagogues. Police last year disrupted what they said was a plot to bomb at least two synagogues in the city. The city's Roman Catholic Archbishop Dadeus Grings also caused a stir when he told a local magazine that "more Catholics than Jews died in the Holocaust, but this isn't known because the Jews control the world's media." After the uproar, Grings promised to improve dialogue with Jewish leaders, to reject any denial of the Jewish death toll in the Holocaust and to repudiate the spread of ideas that could provoke anti-Semitism.

Historians say that about 6 million Jews died in the Holocaust, the Nazi effort to exterminate the Jewish people in Europe. Several million other people, including Gypsies, Russians, Poles, religious and political opponents, homosexuals and the disabled were systematically killed as well by Adolf Hitler's regime in Germany.

"The Holocaust was one of the worst massacres in mankind's history, yet many youths and teachers know nothing about it," Nagelstein said by telephone. "Teaching the Holocaust in public schools will provide a better understanding of the matter and lessons to prevent it from being repeated." Mayor Jose Fortunati said that by discussing the Holocaust, "we could build a more peaceful society and combat violence and intolerance."

<http://www.google.com/hostednews/canadianpress/article/ALegM5hY5eh5KrwD4LFfCFqz8HNNogFqvA?docId=4880305>

Remember this?

'Holocaust Couple's Love Story Exposed As Lie'

By LA SHAWN on 29 December 2008, in LUNACY

Oh, how I wish I'd blogged about the latest literary hoax last week before the publisher canceled the contract! Feet-dragging is a bad habit, boys and girls.

The air's out of the balloon now. A man named Herman Rosenblat claimed that while he was in a concentration camp, a Jewish girl whose family was pretending to be Christian gave him apples over a fence. One day he asked her not to come back because he had an "appointment" with the gas chamber. He wasn't killed; he was transferred to another camp. Years later, he went on a blind date with a woman who turned out to be the girl who'd given him apples lo those many years ago. Critics cried foul.

First, the concentration camp where Rosenblat said he was detained didn't have gas chambers.

Second, the Nazi's didn't tell prisoners when they were going to the gas chamber. The point was to trick them into going. Third, there's no way Herman or Roma could have gotten close to the fence without the guards seeing them. Fourth, it was highly unlikely that a Jewish family who feared the Nazi's wouldn't know about their nine-year-old daughter's daily visits to a concentration camp fence, for crying out loud, or would allow her to continue once they found out. And on and on. Herman Rosenblat and his wife Roma ended up on Oprah, and Berkley Books offered him a deal for his memoirs, Angel at the Fence: The True Story of a Love That Survived. And you know Hollywood is partial to Holocaust stories. The book is set to be made into a movie.

Despite Rosenblat's story being discredited, publisher Berkley Books stood by him until December 27, when the company canceled the contract. Rosenblat admitted he'd made up the "love story." But guess what? Hollywood still intends to make the movie. It's fiction, so why not?

Read all about it at The New Republic, which exposed the hoax. The latest article contains links to previous ones: http://blogs.tnr.com/tnr/blogs/the_plank/archive/2008/12/29/how-tnr-exposed-a-new-oprahendoredmemoirasahoax.aspx.

Perhaps the biggest burn victim is Oprah Winfrey. Her gullibility knows no bounds. This is the second memoir she's endorsed and gushed over that's turned out to be a big fat lie. You may recall that after she made memoir author James Frey a lot of money, he confessed to fakery.

The so-called bad boy drunk who wrecked cars, went to prison, fell in love with a fellow drunk in rehab who killed herself, tamed a wild beast of a hardened criminal, etc., was nothing more than a wanna-be bad-a, a relatively unremarkable frat boy who spent maybe a few hours in jail. Check out The Smoking Gun's outstanding piece of journalism exposing Frey.

Oprah asked Frey to come back on the show to explain himself. For the first time in years, I watched the show. I had to. It was funny and worth every minute. Frey looked like a little boy being scolded by his mommy.

Will Miss Oprah ask an old couple to return and explain themselves?

I'm not a Jew, so I don't pretend to understand how upsetting Rosenblat's lies must be to people who were imprisoned in the camps and their relatives. Why did he do it? "I wanted to bring happiness to people," he said. "I brought hope to a lot of people. My motivation was to make good in this world."

The problem, Mr. Rosenblat, is that your story was wide open for exposure. Your story was obviously phony to thinking people and easy to pick apart. How many Jewish people were touched in some way by the Holocaust? Did you not stop to think about Holocaust survivors who could verify, or in this case, refute, your claims? The ramifications were too great to even take the chance, in my opinion. But, whatever. Time to dust off the live-blogging skills!

Update (12/30): NYT on fake love story memoir.
<http://lashawnbarber.com/archives/2008/12/29/holocaust-couples-love-story-exposed-as-lie/>
<http://lashawnbarber.com/archives/category/lunacy/>

Worldwide hatred of Israel

Conference on de-legitimization of Israel highlights multipronged demonization effort: Manfred Gerstenfeld 18 October 2010

Many perpetrators from very diverse backgrounds are heavily involved in the ongoing de-legitimization of Israel, without any one being dominant. This is different from the build up of extreme anti-Semitism before the Holocaust. Then most of the overwhelming demonization of the Jews came from a single source: Hitler and his followers and allies. They built on an infrastructure laid over many centuries, mainly by the Catholic Church and certain factions of Protestantism.

On Sunday and Monday of the past week Boston-based CAMERA – which combats media distortion of information about Israel – held a conference on Israel's de-legitimization. The lecturers were experts who have studied various sources of demonization. This gave an audience of about 1,000 people an overview of this frightening phenomenon. Many had come from other parts of the United States and Canada.

The purveyors of anti-Israel hatred include large parts of the Muslim world. At the conference Daniel Pipes said that Jews should focus their efforts on combating adherents of radical Islam. His view however may be too narrow an approach as much of the de-legitimization of Israel comes from the mainstream of Muslim societies. Former Canadian Justice Minister Irwin Cotler showed how several categories of law, including human rights law, have been corrupted by the United Nations. The same subject was dealt with in more detail by Professor Anne Bayefsky of the Hudson Institute.

Andrea Levin, who heads CAMERA, gave a number of examples of how the New York Times corrupts information about Israel. The academic Tammy Benjamin illustrated how anti-Israel hatred is promoted on the campuses of the University of California, the largest State university system in the United States. The forces of de-legitimization are on the one hand university teachers who use their courses for propaganda. On the other hand Muslim and leftist students spew hatred against Israel and try to frighten pro-Israeli Jews. Even if this contradicts university rules often administrations hardly react to complaints.

Anti-Israel Israelis

Professor Alvin Rosenfeld of the University of Indiana focused on Jews and Israelis who are in the forefront of those causing damage to Israel. He mentioned that after the Gaza flotilla incident more than 1,000 US rabbis, rabbinical students and academics instituted a fast to pray that Israel will become a more moral state and be nicer to the inhabitants of Gaza. Professor Gerald Steinberg of Bar Ilan University, who heads NGO Monitor claimed, that NGOs are often at the origin of anti-Israel news in the media.

Other hate promoters are various Christian groups, mainly liberal Protestants. Yet another source of hatred is trade unions. One cannot neglect right-wing sources of anti-Israel hate promotion, but one overwhelming message of the Boston conference was that the greatest threat to Israel comes from various groups in the Muslim world, assisted to a large extent by many extreme left-wing forces, but also by more moderate mainstream forces from social democracy.

The cartoonist Yaakov Kirschen drew a number of categories of Jewish Israel haters as cuckoo birds. In particular, his caricature of the ultraorthodox Neturei Karta cuckoo elicited much laughter in the public.

A conference of this kind gives a much more complete overview than reading about anti-Israeli incidents in newspapers from time to time, or even hearing a lecture on a specific category of perpetrators. One also understands much better that the Israeli government has been neglecting this largely non-violent war against the country for many decades and until today.

Potential genocide

Israel today is endangered by potential genocide in two ways. The first is obvious. If radical Muslims obtain an atom bomb, there is a substantial threat that they will use it against Israel. One such peril comes from Shiite Iran. The American government has informed the Israeli government that Iran is about one year away from producing such a nuclear weapon. Another possibility is that atom bombs belonging to Pakistan, a Sunni Muslim country, fall into radical Muslim hands if disorder in Pakistan increases. This is far from theoretical: in September this year, Asif Ali Zardari, Pakistan's president, warned that the country's very survival was threatened by the twin forces of extremism and the huge floods that struck the country earlier this year.

There is, however, a second way in which Israel is threatened by mass murder. This is the above described method of the "thousand cuts." In my presentation on the increasing ideological criminality of Europe I pointed out that the culmination of the growing pressure exerted on Israel may force it to make concessions and go back to indefensible borders, which Abba Eban called the "Auschwitz borders."

A viable peace may be possible. However, a process in which only Israel makes concessions will lead to an agreement which is called "peace" but may be nothing more than an intermediate step to mass murder. This is all the more true in an increasingly uncertain world deriving from two major factors: the structural instability of the global economy and the large jihadist forces in the Muslim world.

The message of the increasing de-legitimization of Israel is frightening, yet we should learn to understand it as best as possible. It was an important achievement of CAMERA, to bring so many expert lecturers together from many countries.

Dr. Manfred Gerstenfeld has published 18 books, several of which deal with anti-Semitism and the de-legitimization of Israel.

<http://www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-3970798,00.html>

Sephardi leader Yosef:

Non-Jews exist to serve Jews, October 18, 2010

JERUSALEM (JTA) -- Israeli Sephardic leader Rabbi Ovadia Yosef in his weekly Saturday night sermon said that non-Jews exist to serve Jews.

"Goyim were born only to serve us. Without that, they have no place in the world; only to serve the People of Israel," he said during a public discussion of what kind of work non-Jews are allowed to perform on Shabbat.

"Why are gentiles needed? They will work, they will plow, they will reap. We will sit like an effendi and eat," he said to some laughter.

Yosef, the spiritual leader of the Shas Party and the former chief Sephardi rabbi of Israel, also said that the lives of non-Jews are protected in order to prevent financial loss to Jews.

"With gentiles, it will be like any person: They need to die, but God will give them longevity. Why? Imagine that one's donkey would die, they'd lose their money. This is his servant. That's why he gets a long life, to work well for this Jew," said the rabbi, who recently turned 90.

An audio recording of some of the rabbi's remarks was broadcast on Israel's Channel 10. The American Jewish Committee condemned the rabbi's remarks in a statement issued Monday. "Rabbi Yosef's remarks -- suggesting outrageously that Jewish scripture asserts non-Jews exist to serve Jews -- are abhorrent and an offense to human dignity and human equality," said AJC Executive Director David Harris. "Judaism first taught the world that all individuals are created in the divine image, which helped form the basis of our moral code. A rabbi should be the first, not the last, to reflect that bedrock teaching of our tradition."

<http://www.jta.org/news/article/2010/10/18/2741341/rabbi-yosef-non-jews-exist-to-serve-jews>

Nazi praise sparks Swiss rethink of Le Corbusier

Bradley S. Klapper, AP Writer, October 6, 2010

GENEVA -- He's one of the titans of 20th Century architecture, but Le Corbusier is suddenly feeling the weight of history working against him. The modernist master's legacy is coming under pressure after Switzerland's largest bank dropped an ad campaign featuring the architect and artist last week. Now, Zurich authorities are debating whether to dump plans to name a square after him.

Letters made public in recent years and a 2008 biography suggest that the visionary known for his cool, spare designs and revolutionary urban planning ideas was a Nazi sympathizer whose Fascist tendencies went far beyond what was previously known.

One letter shows Le Corbusier expressing clear enthusiasm for Hitler, even if at other times he calls the German leader a "monster."

"If he is serious in his declarations, Hitler can crown his life with a magnificent work: the remaking of Europe," Le Corbusier wrote to his mother in October 1940, at a time when he was shopping his radical ideas about urbanism across the continent. That was also shortly after Hitler's armies conquered France and much of Western Europe.

It's been a tough week in Switzerland for the artist born Charles-Edouard Jeanneret, who died in 1965 after helping to create an international modern architecture movement along with giants such as American Frank Lloyd Wright and German Bauhaus innovators Walter Gropius and Mies van der Rohe.

The revelations are not completely surprising, as it has long been known that Le Corbusier aligned himself with the French far-right in the 1930s and accepted a post as a city planner for the Vichy regime that ruled France and collaborated with Nazi Germany during World War II.

What is perhaps most noteworthy is the sudden Swiss rejection of a native son -- born in the sleepy town of La Chaux-de-Fonds -- whose face appears on the 10-franc bill. His name graces a square in the capital of Bern and a street in Geneva. "For UBS, the most important thing in our campaign is the message we wish to communicate," said Jean-Raphael Fontannaz, a spokesman for the Zurich-based banking giant. "We don't want the message to be lost in a discussion about Le Corbusier. We also don't wish to hurt the feelings of anyone."

Fontannaz said UBS AG used Le Corbusier in an advertising drive that began in August. It dropped the artist last week.

UBS' decision came after protests from Jewish groups and publishers in Switzerland, who accused Le Corbusier of being an anti-Semite. The accusation hit a raw nerve with a bank that suffered a crisis in the 1990s over revelations that it prevented Jewish claimants from accessing Holocaust-era accounts belonging to their ancestors. The row resulted in a $1.25 billion settlement.

"It's incomprehensible that UBS chose Le Corbusier as an exemplary Swiss personality," Vreni Mueller-Hemmi, head of the Swiss-Israel Society, told the weekly SonntagsZeitung. The group's vice president, Lukas Weber, told The Associated Press that he was pleased with UBS' decision.

Zurich authorities decided three years ago to name a square next to the central train station after Le Corbusier once construction was completed. But authorities now say they are taking another look at the historical record. A decision will be made at a meeting of the city's street-naming commission next month, said spokeswoman Charlotte de Koch. Le Corbusier left an enormous body of work, including some 30,000 architectural plans, 7,000 watercolor paintings, 500 oil paintings and 52 books. He was perhaps as famous for his philosophy of architecture as for actual works. Among his most famous structures are the Villa Savoye near Paris, the Punjab government complex at Chandigarh, India, the Unite d'Habitation apartment block in Marseille and Notre-Dame-du-Haut chapel in Ronchamp, France.

Despite the recent controversies, Le Corbusier still has Swiss defenders. "It's a different issue if you make a publicity campaign," said Werner Abegg, spokesman for the money-printing national bank. "The bank note highlights essentially the influence of a person. It's uncontested in the case of Le Corbusier." Abegg told the AP that the bank had no plans to change its currency.

http://news.yahoo.com/s/ap/20101006/ap_en_ot/eu_switzler_and_le_corbusier_2

Multiculturalism in Germany has failed, says Chancellor, October 18, 2010

BERLIN: Germany's attempts to create a multicultural society in which people from various cultural backgrounds live together peacefully has failed, the Chancellor, Angela Merkel, says. Multikulti, the concept that "we are now living side by side and are happy about it", does not work, Dr Merkel told a meeting of younger members of her conservative Christian Democratic Union (CDU) party at Potsdam near Berlin at the weekend. "This approach has failed, totally," she said.

Dr Merkel spoke a week after talks with the Turkish Prime Minister, Recep Tayyip Erdogan, in which they pledged to do more to improve the poor integration record of Germany's 2.5-million-strong Turkish community.

Horst Seehofer, the leader of the CDU's Bavarian sister party, CSU, told the same party meeting that the two parties were "committed to a dominant German culture and opposed to a multicultural one". "Multikulti is dead," he said.

While warning against "immigration that weighs down on our social system", Dr Merkel said Germany needed specialists from overseas to keep the pace of its economic development.

The head of the chamber of commerce and industry, Hans Heinrich Driftmann, said Germany was in urgent need of about 400,000 engineers and qualified workers. "The lack is causing a loss of growth of about 1 per cent," he said in an interview.

Jewish leaders, meanwhile, warned that German society and democracy were under threat from extremists. A recent study should prompt the government to act against anti-democratic ideas, the secretary-general of the Central Council of Jews, Stephan Kramer, told the Rheinpfalz am Sonntag weekly.

Mr Kramer criticised Mr Seehofer for ideas he said were "not only petty but outright irresponsible" and called the immigration debate "hysterical".

The study, by the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, showed that more than a third (34.3 per cent) of the 2411 people surveyed believed the country's 16 million immigrants or people with foreign origins came for the social benefits. About the same number (35.6 per cent) think Germany is being "overrun by foreigners" and more than one in 10 called for a "fuehrer" to run the country "with a strong hand".

Mohammed A. Hegazi mehegazi@yahoo.com

31 October 2010 Subject: Away from politics

- 1. Why is 'abbreviated' such a long word?
- 2. Why is the man who invests all your money called a broker?
- 3. Why is the time of day with the slowest traffic called rush hour?
- 4. Why isn't there mouse-flavoured cat food?
- 5. Why do they sterilize the needle for lethal injections?
- 6. Why are they called apartments when they are all stuck together?
- 7. If flying is so safe, why do they call the airport the terminal?

Should recipient of this email be interested, these are my blogs: <http://www.hegazi.blogspot.com/> <http://www.egyptianblogspot.blogspot.com> (Arabic)

Israel's loyalty oath: Discriminatory by design

The Guardian, Monday 11 October 2010

New pledge requires future citizens declare their loyalty to an ideology, one intended to exclude Palestinians

There are two narratives at work in Israel that have a bearing on the capacity of its leaders to negotiate the creation of an independent Palestinian state next to it. The first is official and intended for external consumption. It is the one that claims Israel is ready to sit down with the Palestinians in direct talks without preconditions and Mahmoud Abbas, the Palestinian president, should not have wasted so much of the 10 month partial freeze on settlement building before he did so. On Saturday, America was given another month by the Arab League to persuade Binyamin Netanyahu's government to halt settlement building, the bare minimum required for talks to continue.

There is however a second narrative, which could be called business as usual, and it has nothing to do with occupation, Iran's nuclear programme, Hizbullah's rocket arsenal, or any threat which could be called existential. This was evident in all its inglorious yesterday when the Israeli cabinet approved a measure requiring candidates for Israeli citizenship to pledge loyalty to "the state of Israel as a Jewish and democratic state". The naturalisation oath would not apply to Jews, who are granted automatic citizenship under the law of return, so it is, by definition, discriminatory. The existing text binds individuals to declare their loyalty to the state of Israel. The new version requires future citizens to declare their loyalty not just to a state but an ideology, one specifically designed to exclude one fifth of its citizens who see themselves as Palestinian.

Palestinian Israeli leaders have described this proposal as racist. Palestinian Israeli citizens do not have to take this oath, but their partners seeking naturalisation do. Neither could agree with Israel's characterisation of itself as a Jewish state. It could be a state of Jews and all its citizens, but never a Jewish state. Nor is this the only bill around. There are 20 others in the slipstream that have a similar effect: there is a loyalty law for Knesset members and for film crews; there are bills that make it a criminal offence to deny the existence of Israel; that penalise the mourning of Nakba Day; that force any group financed by a foreign nation to report each contribution; and a bill to deny ethnic minorities' access to Jewish settlements. The authors of these proposals not only intend to create a state ideology but to police it.

The question that lies behind this is why, and why now? Are these the actions of a nation prepared to make a historical compromise, end occupation and live in peace with its neighbourhood? If they are and we are all wildly misinterpreting this, why alienate and incite the very people who could have helped by their example bring a historic settlement about, people who have accepted the existence of Israel, who have never in their history taken up arms against it? This applies to Christian as well as Muslim. The opposite is happening. The Palestinian Israeli experience of inequality and discrimination only promotes the view that being a minority in a state with a Jewish majority is rapidly becoming untenable.

The Labour minorities minister Avishay Braverman described the loyalty oath yesterday as a terrible mistake. But it is surely more than that. Mistake implies miscalculation, and there is calculation in this. It seeks to pre-empt negotiation on the third core issue after borders and the division of Jerusalem – the right of return of Palestinian refugees to sovereign Israeli territory. Abbas happens to be one of those refugees. If Netanyahu refuses to extend the settlement freeze, Abbas, the most pliant Palestinian negotiator Israel is likely to encounter, has threatened to resign, dissolve the Palestinian authority or seek US and UN recognition for a future Palestinian state. Netanyahu is only hastening the day when this happens and in one sense, he is doing the world a service. Future citizens will be swearing loyalty to a state that can not make peace.

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/commentisfree/2010/oct/11/israel-loyalty-oath-discriminatory>

The Bracken/Faine Saga: Aussie Trades Unionist Exposes 9/11

1. Cover-up exposed by Anthony Lawson:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tE3pMPObcGU>

2. The next day Kevin Bracken hammers Jon Faine again: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=akSUWJa-AGc>
3. This is how Prime Minister Julia Gillard responds in Parliament: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-CVLZqUA2OM>

Aussie Hero, Trades Unionist, exposes 9/11 cover-up. Story and Video by Anthony Lawson and John Bursill – Veterans Today

4. In the aftermath Faine saw fit to keep on ranting:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RJ50U3ws0iM>

5. Kevin Bracken on the Alex Jones show in the US:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NMEwaCsUCZO>

6. October 27, 2010 posted by Gordon Duff

<http://www.veteranstoday.com/author/gordonduff/>

Listen to an overbearing gatekeeper, Jon Faine, attempt to rubbish the genuine concerns of Australian Trades Union President, Kevin Bracken, in an attempt to stifle any debate about the many anomalies in the official 9/11 story.

Kevin Bracken takes on ABC Radio Journalist Jon Faine: "Good on yer, Kev. You're a bonza bloke and a real credit to the old country. You're a Fair Dinkum Aussie and you've got my vote, any day." ...Anthony Lawson

From the Director Adelaide Institute

MERRY CHRISTMAS & A HAPPY NEW YEAR 2011

-suggestions

Dear Supporters

1. We are ending the year a little early by closing our newsletter posts at the end of November 2010, but have enclosed copies of newsletters for December and Januar - up to No 545.
2. If all goes well, we shall be back at the end of January, beginning of February 2011.
3. If you would like to continue receiving the hard copy of the newsletter please advise. This is important because if you do not inform us, then we shall take you off our list. Unfortunately economic constraints force us to do this.
4. If you are on the Internet, then you can simply view or download the newsletters from Adelaide Institute's website - www.adelaideinstitute.org.
5. This year has been blah, blah, blah... 350905607915tg43894860-481T77767(^(&TI%%#$W^%&^)(&^%&()&^%$^&)&^%$$^%&^YT%^&()*657

I wish you**

Peter M Hartung
Adelaide, 14 November 2010