Auschwitz 'showers' highlight challenge of Holocaust tourism

The well-being of visitors and the integrity of the historical commemoration is a difficult balance for emotionally charged WWII sites

JTA – Pawel Sawicki gets to his desk every morning by 7, but he works no regular office job.

Sawicki is an information officer at the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Memorial and Museum, the sprawling complex in southern Poland that encompasses the largest and most notorious Nazi death camp. More than 1.1 million people, mostly Jews, were murdered there.

"I look out my window and see barbed wire and barracks," Sawicki told JTA. "It's never just a job. You have to find ways to deal with the emotions."

Auschwitz is a place where history, commemoration and, increasingly, mass tourism collide. The iconic symbol of the Holocaust, Auschwitz is also a major tourist attraction — the most-visited museum in Poland. Its complex identity — Auschwitz is also a sacred site of martyrdom for Catholic Poles — has made it an emotional, and sometimes political, battleground of memory since the end of World War II.

The latest instance erupted last week, when the museum's effort to help visitors during an extreme heat wave by installing misting showers provoked outrage among those who felt they invoked the fake showers at Birkenau that spewed poison gas.

'Zyklon B was dropped inside the gas chambers in a completely different way – through holes in the ceiling or airtight drops in walls'

Facing a storm of criticism, the museum defended its actions. "Something had to be done" to help visitors cope with the sweltering temperatures, museum officials wrote in a Facebook post. The museum also pointed out that the Nazi gas chamber showers where nearly 1 million were killed by Zyklon B poison gas looked nothing like the misting sprinklers.

"Zyklon B was dropped inside the gas chambers in a completely different way – through holes in the ceiling or airtight drops in walls," the museum said.

As the heat wave abated, the misting showers at Auschwitz were removed.

"The site is so complicated, with so many conflicting aspects, that nothing is easy," said Tomasz Cebulski, a historian, tour guide and educator whose doctoral work was on the museum's political and international aspects.

Created by an act of the Polish Parliament in 1947, the memorial museum comprises two parts – the Auschwitz I camp, entered through the iconic "Arbeit Macht Frei" gate, and the vast area of Auschwitz II, at Birkenau, about two miles away.

The museum's permanent exhibition, displayed in several of the brick barracks in the Auschwitz I camp, opened in 1955 and has changed little since. It includes displays of original artifacts and masses of material left by victims: suitcases, eyeglasses, prosthetic limbs, clothing, kitchen utensils, even hair shorn from victims' heads.

Birkenau is a memorial site, a vast open area marked by the grim ruins of the crematoria and barracks and bisected by railway tracks. At one end stands a large monument to victims erected in the 1960s; at the other, the looming entry tower and siding where trains carrying victims were unloaded.

One of the museum's key challenges is conserving the site's deteriorating buildings, ruins, archival holdings and artifacts. The museum is a state-run entity. The Polish government provides more than one-third of the approximately $15 million annual budget, and the European Union also contributes some funding. But more than half of the budget is generated by the museum itself through visitor fees for guides, sales of publications, onsite business concessions and other income sources.

In 2009, a special Auschwitz-Birkenau Foundation was established to “amass and manage” a perpetual endowment fund of $120 million whose income is specifically earmarked for long-term conservation. Some 35 states have pledged or donated funds to the endowment, including more than half of the sum from Germany alone.

The museum employs 339 staffers, including security personnel, educators, archivists, preservationists and technology specialists. They face a daunting task, said Emory University Holocaust scholar Deborah Lipstadt.

“They are both a museum to educate and also a memorial. And they are the major site of destruction,” she said.

“There are very tough questions about preservation that are being dealt with in a most professional and sensitive manner,” Lipstadt said. For example, “the remnants of the gas chambers are collapsing. Do you go in and shore them up? Or let them collapse? Do you stop the hair from disintegrating or not?”

A dramatic upsurge of visitors in recent years has put serious strains on the fragile infrastructure at the site.

A record 1.53 million people visited Auschwitz-Birkenau in 2014, up from less than 500,000 in 2000. This year, more than 1 million toured the site in the first seven months of the year.

The growing numbers of visitors prompted the museum to implement new visitor regulations and security measures in January. For the first time, there is a ban on bringing backpacks or other large bags into the site.

Basic entrance to Auschwitz-Birkenau is free. But during peak hours entrance is now limited, and visitors must pay to tour the site in groups led by one of the nearly 300 guides, working in 18 languages, who have been licensed by the museum after specialized training programs, often in cooperation with Yad Vashem, Israel’s Holocaust museum.

Because of their large numbers, many visitors must wait hours before they can enter the site. That has helped bolster visits to the nearby Auschwitz Jewish Center, a museum and prayer and study center established in 2000 and located about two miles away in the town of Oswiecim. Before the Holocaust, most of Oswiecim’s residents were Jews, and part of the museum is located in Oswiecim’s sole remaining synagogue, Chevra Lomdei Mishnayot.

The Oswiecim museum is dedicated to educating about the Holocaust and Polish Jewish heritage, and there is some cooperation between it and the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Memorial and Museum on educational programs, including for university fellows, U.S. cadets and midshipmen, and law-enforcement personnel.

But the center at Oswiecim gets only a small fraction of the visitors to Auschwitz-Birkenau, according to the director of the Oswiecim museum, Tomasz Kuncewicz.

“We think of both the security of the site and the security of visitors’

“It is a logistical challenge – how to handle the immense numbers so that they can see the exhibits comfortably,” Sawicki said of Auschwitz-Birkenau. “With so many visitors, enhanced security measures were inevitable. We think of both the security of the site and the security of visitors.”

A $26 million off-site visitors’ center, due to open in the next two years, is expected to help, and a new education center is also planned.

The museum also has embarked on an 11-year, government-funded project to revamp its permanent exhibit in a way that will modernize the presentation and reflect current scholarship while at the same time preserve the authenticity of the site and material on display.

“I was for years very critical of mass tourism to Auschwitz,” said Cebulski, the historian. “But lately I’ve come to feel that we should see it as an opportunity. To have 1.5 million people be exposed to this original historic site, even if they spend only 10 minutes thinking of what Auschwitz is, it accomplishes something.”

A Syrian girl in Belgrade explains the fraud of the 'Syrian immigration crisis'

Говор Рима Дариоус на протесту У Београду, Published on Sep 6, 2015

Dear friends I am here today in front of you as a proud Syrian citizen, to tell you about the situation in my country, that is also important to Serbia. We used to be loved and respected people. Before this war our biggest issue was Palestine. We wanted to solve our small problems compared to what we have today (Bureaucracy and Corruption in some sectors.) we didn't know injustice, terrorism or criminality. We worked hard the last 10 years before this war and we made big steps. The most important thing that before this war we didn't have Syrian refugees.

We had strong national identity. Those who you see out in the streets of Belgrade on their way to Germany or Holland, they are not the real Syrian. Don't miss understanding me, I love my people, but my people those who are fighting for Syria for our homelands.

Yes those refugees suffered but who didn't suffer through this war? Why the rest of the Syrian are staying and resisting? If they are really refugees they would choose for the first safe place that they can reach and not fight with the Hungarian police because they want to reach Germany. Let me ask you if the West doesn't want those refugees or doesn't want them to die in the sea, why it doesn't stop the sanctions on Syrian people? That already costed Syria 143 billion dollars?

If it is not the West agenda why it doesn't help those Syrian to stay by supporting the Syrian army to get rid of the terrorist and make Syria safe again? Why they don't help to rebuild the destroyed houses of the people with the money that they spend on refugees? They took away the people who can rebuild this country. They want to break Syria and the Syrian people. They want to steal

Syrian doctors and their best students on one hand. This will cause a brain drain. On the other hand multinationals want cheap labours so they can lower the wages.

We lost 100,000 soldiers fighting against extremists till now, I don't hear the West crying on them, those who gave their souls to defend a nation leaving behind them proud families deserve to be helped, on the other side they cry on a person died trying to run away and leave their country, many of them are jihadists, and even more they are paid thousands of euros for this.

Let me tell you that the money a family of 5 persons will pay to reach Europe is enough to buy a house in a safe area of Syria, start a new job and live good. They are not refugees they are economically motivated immigrants. After 5 years of war our navy still for-filling its international duties. Our coast is well guarded and not a single boat with immigrants leaves from there. Another trend those days is to take Christians out of Syria. Emptying one of the first Christian lands from Christians...What we have today in Syria is similar to what you had in Serbia before. They target our identity our unity and our sovereignty.

I want to underline that the Syrian nation and Serbian nation were always friends, we have big and respected orthodox community, Syria didn't recognize independence of Kosovo and we have many mutual enemies. You should know that as you fight against politicians who promote new world order, USA interests and mass immigration, at the same time you are saving many people's lives and their future. We are more than connected, some Albanian terrorists that were fighting in Kosovo, are today killing civilians in Syria, and this is allowed by some corrupted politicians in the USA, their allies in EU, and their followers here in Serbia, and be aware that wave of migration will return to Serbia.

Dear friends all I ask you today is to stand by us as a people defending you in the same time as we defend our selves. Stand by our army by our right cause, because if we lost this war jihadists won't stop in Syria. Together we will resist until victory.

"...Please try to understand us. Your liberal and democratic principles mean nothing here. You must consider again our realities in the Middle East because you are welcoming in your countries an ever-growing number of Muslims. Also, you are in danger. You must make strong and courageous decisions, even at the cost of contradicting your principles. You think all men are equal but that is not true. Islam does not say that all men are equal. Your values are not their values. If you do not understand this soon enough, you will become the victims of the enemy you have allowed in your home."

New from Vincent Reynouard: Shoah - a story that is not believable

By Vincent Reynouard

Editorial: "Shoah: a story not credible"

Here's the video synthesis that I promised you. In 47 minutes, I developed the revisionist arguments most impactful in my opinion.

Outline of the video

1. Simple administrative officials chose the method of extermination
 - - The choice of Zyklon B
 - - The ridiculous thesis of improvised massacre
2. A first lie from Georges Bensoussan, the historian, about the crematoria of Auschwitz
3. Crematoria 2 and 3: an absurd Construction
 - - Gas chambers in the basement: an illogicality

- - 140-200 return trips of the elevator for a single gassing!
4. The insoluble problem of cremations
 - - Ovens provide very inadequate returns
 - - The cremation pits: a physical impossibility
 - - Provisional Conclusion
 5. Two simple ways to suffocate. The absurdity of "introductory columns"
 - - A simple way that should have been used
 - - Zyklon B useless ...
 - - The ridiculous thesis of "introductory columns"
 - - The non-existent holes
 6. The "alternative proof"
 - - The shoes, suitcases ...
 - - Hair of "gassed"
- General conclusion.

Carolyn's recommendation is to turn on the "closed captions" (CC). It helps in understanding the French, which has many similarities to English. I do hope someone will supply sub-titles in English. But unfortunately, supposed supporters do not send money to this cause. It is really quite shameful. Go to phdnm.org

Finally Eric Hunt's stunning documentary on the alleged Treblinka extermination camp is also available on DVD!

Currently available only in NTSC format (US DVD format), which won't play in European (PAL) DVD players! (We are working on a PAL release.)

Were 900,000 Jews "gassed" at Treblinka? Were 3.9 million Jews "steamed to death" in "steam chambers" there, too, as the Allied victors asserted right after World War II during the Nuremberg trials?

The current official "Holocaust" story is that Treblinka 2 is the largest mass burial site in the entire world, where the Germans gassed 900,000 Jews in 13 "gas chambers" disguised as shower rooms."

"Holocaust Revisionists" or "Holocaust Deniers" assert that there is no evidence to support this claim, and tales of "gas chambers disguised as shower rooms" are wartime atrocity fiction — similar to previously debunked claims about Jews being made into soap and lampshades.

Between 2012 and 2014, British Archaeologist Dr. Caroline Sturdy Colls conducted investigations on the grounds of the former Treblinka camp with the intention to refute the Deniers' claims once and for all. The results of her studies were prominently featured by TV documentaries in both the UK and the US. In The Treblinka Archaeology Hoax, US filmmaker Eric Hunt expertly analyzes Dr. Sturdy Colls's investigations and exposes them as a massive fraud. For instance, her research actually included digging near clearly marked Christian graves claiming to find new "hidden mass graves"; she also falsely assigned homicidal intent to a normal life-saving bath and disinfection complex at the entrance to the Majdanek concentration camp, and misidentified a terracotta tile excavated at Treblinka as belonging to the floor of a homicidal "gas chamber." Free yourself from a lifetime of brainwashing about "Six Million" Jews "gassed" in "Gas Chambers Disguised as Shower Rooms" — watch this eye-opening documentary! With subtitles in English, German, Portuguese and Spanish. Mit Untertiteln in Englisch, Deutsch, Portugiesisch und Spanisch. Com legendas em Inglês, Alemão, Português e Espanhol. Con subtítulos en Inglés, alemán, portugués y español. <http://codoh.com/news/3336/>

Migrants: "humanitarian" interventions generally make things worse

Alain DeBenoist, September 9, 2015 — 5 Comments

The interview that follows was first published in Boulevard Voltaire; translated from the French by Tom Sunic

Q: The photo of that Syrian child stranded on the beach is now in the process of turning a new page in European opinion. In our epoch of "storytelling" it evidently suggests that the migrant issue is a "human drama."

Of course it is a "human drama." One must have dry heart or be blinded by hatred if not recognizing it. Muslims threatened by jihadist Islamism, entire families fleeing the Middle East destabilized by Western policies — of course this is a "human drama." But this is also a political issue and even an issue of geopolitics. Hence the need to figure out the relationship between the political sphere and the humanitarian sphere. Well, experience has shown that "humanitarian" interventions generally only aggravate matters further. The dominance of the legal categories over the political categories is one of the major causes of the impotence of the states.

The migratory tsunami which we are witnessing is adding up to a disaster. First, there was a calculation based on thousands of refugees, then tens of thousands, then hundreds of thousands. As of now more than 350,000 migrants have crossed the Mediterranean over the recent months. Germany has agreed to accept 800,000 of them, far more than the entire registry of its own birth rates each year. We are way ahead of the interstitial immigration of thirty years ago! Faced with such an onslaught the European countries are asking themselves: "How are we going to welcome them?" Never do they ask themselves: "How are we going to prevent them from coming in?" Even the French Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius considers "scandalous" the attitude of the countries wishing to close their borders. Will it be the same way when the number of migrants' entries is counted by the millions? Will the politicians be then more concerned about countless "human dramas" happening in the world right now than about the common good of their fellow citizens? This is the heart of the matter.

Beyond the emotions triggered by the "shock of the photos", which arguments are being offered by those who want to convince us of the merit of the migrations?

Those arguments are being displayed on the two levels; first the moral argument ("these are our brothers, we have a moral obligation to them"); and then the economic argument (judging by the words of William, the Chief Executive of the International Organization for Migration; "Migrations are necessary if we want a prosperous economy." The first argument scrambles together private and personal morality with public and political morality, both of them having their origin in the belief in universalism. Those who use these arguments consider that before being a Frenchman, a German, a Syrian or a Chinese, individuals are "human beings" first, that is to say, they belong in an immediate fashion to humanity, whereas in fact they belong to humanity in a mediate fashion through specific culture in which they were born and which they have inherited. For them, the world is inhabited by abstract, rootless "persons" whose common trait is interchangeability. As for cultures — they see them only as epiphenomena. This is what Jacques Attali said in the Cadmos magazine in 1981: "For me, European culture does not exist, nor has it ever existed."

The Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations has recently released a report about the European countries which says that "in the absence of the replacement migrations the population decline is inevitable." It also states that "for Europe, as a whole, what is needed is twice the level of immigration, as recorded in the 1990s" — barring which the retirement age will be pushed to 75. Europe is aging, immigration will save it; this is the perfect illustration of the idea that men are interchangeable, regardless of their origin. Therefore economic imperatives must prevail over all other imperatives. The ethics of "human rights" is only a cover-up for financial interests.

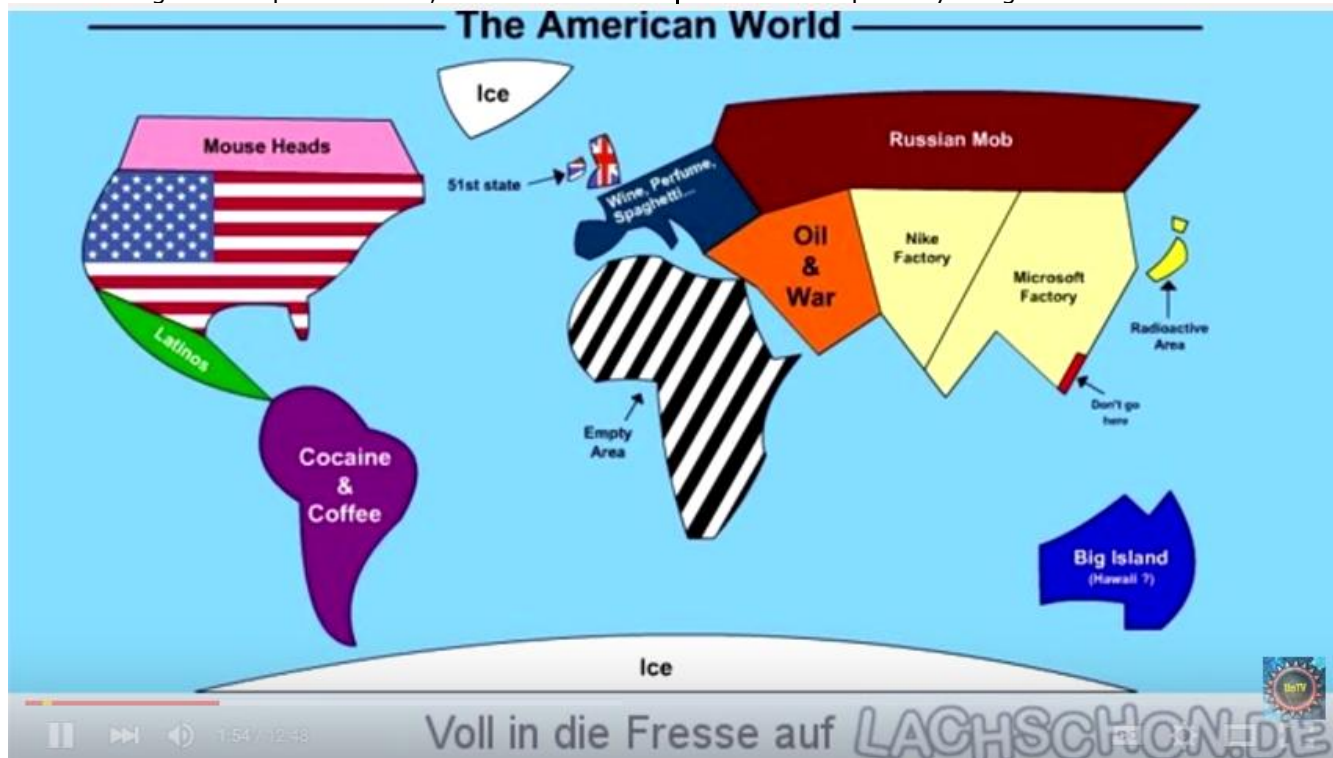

Q: Unquestionably there is also a demographic aspect to it. You know those words by the former Algerian President Houari Boumédiène, which the right-wing folks always like harping on: "Some day millions of men will leave the Southern Hemisphere and move to the Northern Hemisphere. They won't go there as friends; they'll go there in order to conquer it. And they will conquer it with their sons. The belly of our women will secure us victory." Is this the Big Replacement?

According to some, Boumédiène must have uttered these remarks in February 1974 at the 2nd Islamic Summit in Lahore, Pakistan, According to others, he said those words on April 10, 1974, from the rostrum of the UN. This uncertainty is revealing, especially as the full text of this alleged speech of his has never been made public by anybody. Houari Boumédiène, who was not a fool, knew well that the Middle East is in the Northern Hemisphere, not in the Southern Hemisphere! So there is a good chance that this is an apocryphal text.

As far as this topic is concerned it is more prudent to listen to demographers. The population of the African continent has risen from 100 million in 1900 to over a billion today. In the 2050, or thirty-five years down the road, there will be between two and three billion Africans, with four billion by the end of the century. Although demographic relationships cannot be reduced to a communicating vessels phenomenon, it would be naive to expect that such a prodigious population growth, which we ourselves have also fostered, will have no impact on the future migrations. As Bernard Lugan notes: "how can we hope that migrants will stop their rush into the European "paradise" if this "paradise" is undefended and inhabited by old men? "The Big Replacement? Well, personally, I prefer to speak about "the Great Transformation." In my opinion the Big Replacement will occur with the replacement of the man by the machine, that is to say the substitution of artificial intelligence to human intelligence. A danger far closer than we can possibly imagine.

Official Statement On The Duke-Jones Debate

By Dr David Duke, 19 August 2015

As I have said, I am not in any way an enemy of Alex Jones.

He has caused a lot of people to distrust the media, the government, banks and the great powers that are leading America, The West and the World to catastrophe. He is right in opposing the Global elite, but I believe we cannot defeat this elite if we don't identify exactly who this elite is.

We must identify the elite that is in a war with European mankind and all humanity.

Even though Mr. Jones made snide attacks on me in his 30 minute challenge for the debate and in the debate made snide comments about whether I was a goblin or cyclops, etc. and using the completely false "white supremacist" attack in diatribes and caricatures of me before the debate as well as doing so a few times in the debate, I engaged in no name calling or ridicule of him. I could have cited a number of outrageous things he has said and done. I did not respond in kind. I was there to educate.

No. I came on his show at his own invitation to have an intellectual discussion on the world's greatest problem, the globalist war on humanity, a war being waged on behalf of a small tyrannical tribal elite. Yes. I said it, the driving force behind The New World Order and Globalism is the Jewish Tribal Elite!

If you watch this debate I believe you will see that I made my points with facts and heartfelt concern for true human rights and justice. What I did on the show was prove the identity of the real tribal racist supremacists who sit at the pinnacle of power. I used their own leaders words to prove it. For instance in the banking sector, I did so by identifying every FED Chairman and FED Vice-Chairman for the last three decades: Greenspan, Bernanke, Yellen, Cohn and Fischer. The elite of the most powerful financial consortium on earth. I showed that every one of them are Zionist, Jewish supremacists.

I proved that these Jewish tribal supremacists are not simply the part of the globalist elite, but the real rulers over it. I also showed clearly that there are plenty of non-Jewish collaborators, but the Jewish elite are the real force behind globalism.

I proved how these ethnic ultra-supremacists and haters of the rest of mankind are the ones who are literally wiping out European mankind and how they have taken over the elite of every Western nation in mass media, International Banking and now are real power in the politics of our countries.

It is my belief that these racist, supremacist hypocrites can be defeated, will be defeated -- that indeed they do have enormous, unbridled power, but still they can be unseated by changing the consensus. The first task in our struggle for survival and freedom and beauty is to identify those who the driving force behind the greatest evils on Earth, who are behind the endless wars for Israel and who are the real kingpins of the predator banks such as Goldman Sachs and the FED. For instance the Zio supremacists are behind the destruction of every higher human value and ideal with their domination of toxic, degenerate, sick and hate-filled media that poisons and defiles all mankind.

For European mankind, the crisis is even more acute than for other peoples, because the power of the Jewish elite in finance, media and politics has been the overwhelming driving force behind massive immigration into European populated nations which is ethnically cleansing and destroying the European people in each and every Western nation.

I did and still hope that Alex will become part of this rising consensus that is growing exponentially.

I don't want to go on the warpath with Alex Jones.

But, I am shocked that this great debate that he promoted on his show, has suddenly disappeared from his website and channel.

Thousands of people have posted and emailed that they believe this program could be a great turning point because finally the elite, the insiders, are finally clearly identified.

I hope he puts this debate he so promoted before it occurred on his main Alex Jones Youtube Channel.

If he doesn't, thousands of copies of "The Alex Jones show he desperately doesn't want you to see" will be posted the length breadth of the Internet. And that's a shame, because he should proud of the fact he arranged this debate. He should not trying to send it down the memory hole and hide from his listeners.

One way or the other our debate will be seen by millions, perhaps even billions. I don't want him to be seen as man who wants to censor the truth from his own trusting and loyal audience.

Let's hope he won't try to keep his own supporters from seeing the debate he himself promoted, a debate that he technically controlled by his own studio -- while my only arsenal was my mind and my heart -- and av35 dollar video cam.

I didn't mind that he said he doesn't agree with me. I didn't mind that he tried to argue and refute my facts or ideas.

The Zio forces I expose are powerful. I don't mind if he defends himself by saying "Why should I not be able to interview David Duke on my show when he has been on Meet the Press 3 times. (a perfect and bulletproof defense)

All I care is that America and the world awakens to reality of the one great enemy of our people and every people.

The world must awaken to the true power behind the globalist elite tribal tyrants who hate Europeans and who are wiping out this part of humanity who has brought so much beauty and progress to the world, and ultimately to all mankind. I also want the whole world to realize that the Zio takeover and destruction of the European people in our own lands has caused enormous harm to their own nations.

This Great David Duke-Alex Jones Debate will not and cannot be suppressed.

As one Jones supporter said, "The Genie is out of the bottle!"

There is no putting it back.

This video, this Great Debate can be one of the best tools to wake people up. It summarizes everything perfectly with facts and heartfelt honesty. It can be an historic turning point if all us promote and share it enough. It will not go down the memory hole.

That I know.

Jones invited me. He said he believed in free speech that he was an enemy of political correctness.

How will it look if he censors his own show to his own supporters?

I am still hopeful that he will post the video of the debate on his own main Alex Jones Channel on his Youtube website, and that he has me on his show again as he promised.

I wish him well. It was a brave thing to invite me.

But it would be a terrible thing for him to back down now and cower the Jewish tribalist elite tyrants over our society, the masters of political correctness..

This debate can be a turning point in the struggle of European liberation and World Liberation.

When does our liberation happen? When we break through this Zio Dam of oppression of even our thoughts -- the world then will change in an instant.

The Great Debate Jones and I did can help break that dam and when millions begin to speak out against Jewish tribalist supremacism, everyone will then will be able speak openly and identify the tyrants ruling over us. Then the world changes.

They have power over us only because we have not freed our own minds and unmuzzled our voices.

Alex Jones, perhaps is not willing to say what I say, but at least he can help usher in an age of defiance.

He can be defiant in defending and practicing real free thought and free speech. That means allowing discussion about even the ultimate taboo, the tribal supremacist elite who control the global media, global banking, global politics of the world.

I urge Alex Jones to take credit for the good thing he did in actually offering and having a free discussion in which obviously, millions of people finally learned of the ultimate elite in American and around the world.

The truth is obvious, its like when the little boy exposed the nakedness of . "Emperor's New Clothes" You can see this by 90 percent support of my views by his own subscribers after the debate. You can see by tens of thousands of posts on the videos and audios of the debate across the blogosphere!.

Hopefully it was just some misguided staff member that is endeavoring to suppress this Great Debate, maybe one of the legion of Zionists who infiltrate so often and never miss an opportunity to suppress real debate on this critical subject.

Alex Jones should be thanked for proposing and going through with this debate. He arranged it, and he made possible for the world to hear it.

Mr. Jones, the world must hear it! No matter what, the world will hear it!

With best wishes and hopes that Alex Jones will stand by the principles with which he began his media career, and hopefully still holds dear!

And I send my love to each of you who have the courage to stand up honestly for your freedom and heritage wherever you live in the world. Download this debate and let the whole world see and hear it.

It's up to you!

God Bless You All,

Dr. David Duke

Angela Merkel calls her own constituents "vile" for not wanting to race-mix Germany

Published by carolyn on Tue, 2015-08-25 00:43

Is this not a grotesque image? The soft and squishy twin 'puppets' - communist French President Hollande and globalist Chancellor Merkel - are "leading Europe" in developing "a unified system for the right to asylum." The Right to Asylum?? Who voted on that right?

The Merkel-Hollande press conference took place Monday because the two "leaders" are caught in a total bind due to their professed dogma that Europe is an open, multicultural continent. Well, a lot of folks are taking them up on that this summer. But many EU countries don't want to be open and multicultural. So things are not going too smoothly.

Earlier, Merkel over-reacted to criticism from the left for not dealing forcefully enough against the anti-migrant sentiment in her country.

Her spokesman put out a statement that "Berlin would not stand for hostility against the newcomers." The Newcomers! "The chancellor and the entire government condemn the violent rampages and the aggressively xenophobic atmosphere in the strongest terms."

Well, tough titty. The chancellor and the government are out of step with the German people. The German people don't want to bail out Greece for the third time either. But there again, Angie knows best and she wants Germans to be compassionate.

Through her spokesman, she said:

It is vile how right-wing extremists and neo-Nazis try to spread their hollow, hateful messages. Those who act like the aggressors of Heidenau place themselves far outside the law.

It is shameful to see citizens, even families with children, joining the protests to back this horrific sentiment".

Germany is a compassionate country and will not allow refugees to be met here by hateful slogans or alcohol-fuelled loud mouths.

All asylum-seekers, regardless of whether their claims would ultimately be approved, deserved to be treated with "dignity and respect".

A large percentage of the asylum-seekers come from Serbia and Kosovo. When did they decide their lives were in danger? The damn Kosovo Muslims insisted on having their own independent country and now they are running away from it, preferring to live in Germany! Well, the Serbs are doing the same thing. They are just as much of a problem for Germans as are the Syrians and other Africans. They have no right to force themselves into another country because "they want a better life."

Merkel does not have the backbone to stand up against pressure from the left (and from above) insisting she speak out on aggression against refugees by angry citizens in Heidenau on Friday and Saturday night. Critics took to social media using the Twitter hashtags #Merkelschweigt (Silent Merkel) and #Merkelsagtwas (Merkel, say something).

Merkel's vice chancellor, Sigmar Gabriel (a Social Democrat), visited Heidenau on Monday and said Germany should not cede "a single millimetre to this right-wing radical mob". That doesn't sound very compassionate toward his own German people. He reserves his compassion for foreigners.

However, Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier, of Merkel's own party, thinks the same, saying the demonstrators in Heidenau did not represent mainstream German opinion.

"Germany today is a country that is open to the world and -- even in light of the most recent events in Saxony, I stand by it -- a tolerant, culturally rich, diverse country."

Culturally rich, yes ... but soon to be only multi-culturally rich. The German folk need to fight back. God give them the strength.
